8. The method of claim 6, further comprising the step of: charging a service by the communication network for a time interval in which the signaling connection and the payload connection simultaneously exist for the service.

5 9. The method of claim 8, wherein the step of clearing down the payload connection does not occur immediately after the end of data transmission but occurs immediately before the expiration of the time interval already charged.

10 10. A method for controlling service connections in a communication network in order to support access to a service via the communication network, comprising the steps of:
initiating the setup of a service-related signaling connection between a subscriber and a service access system; 15 initiating the setup of a payload connection between the service access system and the subscriber associated with the signaling connection only given data traffic and initiating the clear-down of the payload connection after data transmission.
